Life's Seasons. Bright Summer's tints are fading fast The sear leaves fall with every blast Lo! Summer's pass'd away.
Tis past with all its hopes and fears, Its pleasure and its pain, Its winning smiles, its melting tears: Will these return again?

The falling leaves and fading flowers Betoken life's decay; How fleeting were its sunny hours!-Our Summer's pass'd away. Life's Autumn now is chill and drear; As leaves from withered spray, Our fondest hopes all disappear: Lo! Autumn's pass'd away.

Life's Winter now is cold and drear; What does the sad heart crave, Her eye upraised with trembling tear?— Sweet rest beyond the grave. For, oh! there's rest beyond the tomb,
Where life shall not decay,
Where Spring shall never cease to bloom,
Nor blossoms fade away.

No sun shall make those mansions bright, Yet they shall not be dim;
The Lamb once slain shall be their light,
And all see light in Him.
Through all life's changing scenes I'll raise
My heart and wistful eyes, To where the blessed see and praise The Lamb in Paradise.

Let earthly emblems, then, decay, Life pass with them away: Through Winter's gloomiest night, a ray Points to eternal day. I'll rise above all transient things, I'l fly away—away; To God I'll soar on ang d's wings, In His bright, endless day. Calvary, Nov. 17th.

All must see the absurdity of treating Consumption through the stomach, by filling it with nauseous drugs; the disease is not in the stomach, but in the lungs, and by inhaling medicine in the form of Vapor, I apply the remedy directly to the diseased organ. There is, therefore, no case so hopeless that inhalation will not reach. I earnestly appeal to the common sense of all afflicted with lung diseases, to embrace at once the advantages of inhalation.
